International Urdu Social Science Congress concludes at MANUU

Hyderabad:

In recent years the social science discourse, particularly Sociology, has moved away from examining social and lived reality of marginal and deprived groups, the reason of which is continuous disconnect between the abstract theoretical presuppositions and lived social experience. Prof. Muhammad Talib, Centre for Islamic Studies, University of Oxford, pointed out yesterday in the valedictory session of the International Urdu Social Sciences Congress "Social Sciences in South Asia" organized by Maulana Azad National Urdu University (MANUU), School of Arts and Social Sciences (SA&SS).

Prof. Talib while delivering valedictory address identified the gradual decline after 1947 in dealing with critical questions in Social Sciences. He requested social scientists to ask tough questions like poverty, health, education, social and economic oppression and reasons for increasing marginality in society with more and more field-based researches.

In his presidential remarks, Prof. Akhtarul Wasey, Padma Shree and Emeritus Professor, JMI, suggested the possibility of Indian secular model as the best and exemplar for the whole world. He stressed the need to initiate dialogue with the diverse and multi-religious Indian society to establish peace and strengthen the secular values of Indian republic.

Prof. S.M. Rahmatulla, Pro Vice-Chancellor, MANUU delivered the welcome address.

The chief guest, Prof. Seyda Seydain Hameed, Former Chancellor, MANUU & Former member of planning commission nostalgically remembered how MANUU came into being and acknowledged the role of the Urdu intellectuals in this endeavour. She also touched upon the increasing intolerance in Indian society, which threatens the very fabric of Indian secular society.

Prof. Mushtaq Ahmad Kaw, Rtd. Prof, Dept. of History, MANUU & guest of honour, lamented the lack of funds being allocated to the social science research. He asked the scholars to be more fearless and objective in their approach and forge academic collaborations with other institutions.

Prof. Farida Siddiqui, Dean, SA & SS &, and Convenor, IUSSC presented a brief report of the Congress.

Two plenary sessions and 9 technical sessions were conducted during the Congress. In the two plenary sessions, renowned speakers from different disciplines of Social sciences delivered special lectures on their respective fields of study. The total number of papers presented in the Congress was 89, of which 34 were presented by female scholars.
