How would you create an innovative learning environment?

I have desirable qualifications, having first divisions throughout my degrees. After studying sociology in diverse and plural universities, Jamia Millia Islamia provided perfect training in the subject visa vice Participatory Sociology to go for intensive fieldwork. I joined the M.Phil Programme at JNU which helped me to build special training in the area of health studies and how sociological learning’s can be utilized in research and teaching. Finally, sociological training at Delhi School of Economics provided an apt training in ethnography and this has helped me greatly doing the field of my research areas.

Outline your most significant contribution towards research

I have worked in an area that remained unstudied in sociological research. Hadi Caste, their journey and sociological nuances in the area of illness and health perceptions of Dalits in relation to the studied community in the eastern part of India remains an additional value to the body of knowledge. I did pursue studies and was engaged by intensive fieldwork on the Hadi community who were erstwhile manual scavengers and now sweepers and unlike most other groups having women in this occupation in various parts of the country, they are mostly menfolk. I did study manual scavengers among Muslims which was mostly denied as a current social reality in civil society and academia.

Outline your proposed roadmap for teaching and research for the next five years

At present research is an important aspect for students who much serious at an early stage of their studies. Postgraduate students do involve and spend precious time reading and understanding sociological nuances. my observation tells that they need to be given field exposure while studying sociology and be asked to write the field notes by both doing and studying in order to give and keep a thorough interest in sociology that is reducing in several institutions. I would also be interested to bring studies on the sociology of minorities into the course curriculum to discuss the diversity of Indian society.

State how you satisfy the requirements of the advertisement in respect of qualifications and experience prescribed for the post.

I have desirable qualification for the post of Professor. I have all throughout first divisions from my 10th degree to Masters Degree. After studying in a diverse and plural university like Jamia Millia Islamia for Graduation and Masters in Sociology provided perfect training in the subject visa vice Participatory Sociology provided me to go for intensive fieldwork in association of the deptt. of sociology and civil society organizations. I joined M.Phil programme in JNU that helped me to build special training in public health and social medicine and how sociological learning’s can be utilized in research and teaching. Finally an anthropological journey in Sociology at Delhi School of Economics provided an apt training in ethnography and this has helped me greatly doing field on my research areas.

Secondly, I am also quite suitable having a vast experience in teaching at various universities. I have six continuous years of teaching of various courses of B.A. (Hons/Pass.) and Masters Student at Jamia Millia Islamia before joining Maulana Azad National Urdu University in May 2007. I have also taught basic Sociology for four years as visiting faculty to the students of Allied Health Sciences at Jamia Hamdard (deemed university) that gave an additional learning to me. My educational training and guidance under best academicians at three universities of national repute provided a serious and diligent academic environment and learning. Further, I also served as temporary faculty in the Department of Sociology at Jamia Millia Islamia in my initial period of academic journey whereby my responsibilities were also to guide the students doing Participatory Sociology. I also travelled and guided students in their educational tours sponsored by the department whenever needed.

I have also served for a short durations at National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER), New Delhi, a think tank that develops human development index of the country. I was also associated shortly at National Institute of Social Defence (NISD), a premier policy institute under the aegis of Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment, Government of India.

Contribution:

After joining the centre (CSSEIP), I contributed in institutional building in the centre and at all the responsibility given to me by the university administration successfully. I am founding member of NSS Unit and took personal interest to utilize the energy and motivation of students in several activities within and outside the university at large scale. Blood Donation Camp, Cleaning Drive in Campus, Adoption of Urban settlement as a mandate of NSS, Theatre and play, Celebration of National Importance Days etc. that helped students of Maulana Azad National Urdu University to learning and engage outside the classroom as well. I took several initiatives in the Boys Hostels to reform and bring better life learning hostel life among students as a Warden along my other colleagues.

I organized couple of workshop and national/international seminar and conducted networking programme with government agencies and civil society in order to sensitize and aware them on issues of exclusion and marginalization.

For a year I was a regular Resource Person at NIRD, Hyderabad in the workshop and programmes of the institute. Apart from teaching experiences of more than 15 years, I have good experience of doing field and research that can be quickly seen my resume at the end of the enclosures.

I have contributed in establishment of Social work department at MANUU, to teach as an additional work in order to establish the department for two academic years until new faculty joined there. I also have primary training till primary school in Urdu school and at the same time in Madarasa curriculum that gives me immense help in understanding Urdu and Urdu medium students at my university.

I have studied Women and Society at my Masters Level and later published in the area of Gender Politics and relayed issues. Lastly I have also been teaching and guiding Masters' student in Sociology, Maulana Azad National Urdu University that has been my core interest and it precisely for love and passion in teaching, I took up teaching-research as my profession. Therefore I feel that I satisfy the desirability and necessary qualification for the position and look forward.

At present I am already teaching in the Department of Sociology, MANUU since the establishment of the department and guided students of Masters' for their dissertation. I am also guiding one PhD student in my centre apart from doing all regular duties.

I have been very active and visible in the subject discourse and activities through All Indian Sociological Society, New Delhi first as a life member and later as Convener of Research Committee on Minority Studies.

Lastly, I am in the process of publishing of two primary research work based quality books that I completed as research project and also editing one book on 'Ethnicity and Minority in India'.

My feedbacks from the students are the last gratifying area that gives a sense of fulfillment and always try myself to improve towards teaching and learning activities. Therefore, I have been recording the Video Lesson for Sociology Students with the help of IMC, MANUU.
