The institution have seven schools, 19 departments, and 95 programs up to the Ph.D. level, and it is spread over 11 Indian states. The university's headquarters are situated on 200 acres in Hyderabad's Gachibowli neighbourhood. The best educational facilities are offered by the institution to support research and academic endeavours.

Department of Political Science

The Department of Political Science, established in 2015, aims to expand the discipline of Political Science by exploring unexplored knowledge in traditional, non-Western, and vernacular domains. The department offers MA and Ph.D. programs and courses in some undergraduate programs. The department aims to become a learning centre of excellence, providing multidimensional learning experiences that integrate academic, applied, practical, and cross-disciplinary perspectives. It prioritizes keeping teaching, learning, and research in sync with developments in the discipline and real-world. The department prepares students for various career choices in academics, civil services, media, entrepreneurship, and non-governmental sectors through regular seminars and interactions with professionals.

First All India National Scholar's Conference on "Politics in the 21st Century: Challenges and Prospects"

The 21st century has introduced a multifaceted set of political difficulties; with the emergence of new sets of technology, society and politics are experiencing unprecedented and rapid transformations. The growing influence of technology in governance enables the state to navigate socio-political and economic issues swiftly. However, technology has also brought forth a number of problems, such as violence, organised crime, online fraud, cyber-security, as well as a lack of social trust. These topics are discussed on digital platforms, shaping discourse and narrative that influence national and international politics. Consequently, technology presents governments with numerous problems as well as possibilities, especially in diverse and complex nations such as India. To achieve a comprehensive knowledge of these processes, it is essential to convene scholars from diverse disciplines to discuss, debate, and propose solutions to these pressing issues

The purpose of the One Day All India National Scholars Conference is to serve as a forum for young scholars of the subject to engage in conversation about the changing interaction that exists between society and politics in the 21st century. The event will focus on identifying important obstacles and examining potential chances for establishing a more equitable, inclusive, and democratic future. This will be accomplished by promoting an exchange of ideas among practitioners, researchers, and academics.

Objectives of the Scholar's Conference

- To critically analyse key political challenges of the 21st century, including globalization, populism, socio-economic inequalities, and environmental crises.
- To examine the role of technology in shaping modern society and politics, focusing on social media, cybersecurity, AI, and automation.
- To explore new prospects for democratic governance and social justice, addressing issues of institutional strength, social inequality, and minority rights.
- To foster interdisciplinary collaboration among scholars, creating a network for continued research and dialogue on emerging societal and political issues.

Themes and Sub-themes:

- Democracy, Governance, and Social Justice
